

ABSTRACT

A system and process is provided for computer-assisted calculation of the necessary number of carpet tiles needed to cover a given room. The process includes taking known dimensions of the carpet tile, and inputting relevant information with respect to room dimensions to be covered. Based upon the inputted information, the user is provided with information related to the number of tiles needed. The process aids in the efficient installation of tiles to reduce waste and improve appearance.